TREATIES OF PEACE SIGNED

For the first time in history there was signed today in Washington and in Paris a treaty between the three greatest nations of the world for arbitration on all possible subjects of dispute. It was the first time in the history of treaty making that questions of so-called national honor were made subjects for an arbitration tribunal.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The affixing of official signatures to the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain and France today marked a great step forward in international relations as well as a personal triumph for President Taft. For many months he has advocated this step to bring about an advanced civilization between the world's powers.

The first signature attached today was that of Ambassador Janssens in Paris, former home secretary. Mr. Janssens was secretary of State Knox and was ambassador in London from 1931 to 1935. At the same time Secretary of State Knox signed the American copy of the French treaty. Ambassador Bryan came to the White House today for the purpose of appointing his successor. He has two copies of the British treaty in the presence of President Taft in the history of Room of the White House. The White House is now treating to the public on this occasion. It is not improbable that they will be submitted to the Senate for passage.

Illustrating treaties have their importance in the affairs of President. It was a dinner of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, which was held in this city last December. The President was present and he saw the reason for the treaties should be the same as the treaties affecting the life interest of the people. It is not probable that these questions were in the President's mind as any other in the President's mind.

The French ambassador, M. Jussier, was present to enter into new treaty relations with the United States. The President was also quick to realize the importance of negotiations. The British government was also quick to realize the importance of negotiations. The British government was also quick to realize the importance of negotiations.

ment which is extended to nations which have taken no part in the armed aggression of Germany and Italy, and the gradual liquidation of armaments and disarmament.

As to the diplomatic question, the text of the treaties will not be made known until the Senate has approved the ratification. If the terms are known, however, the German terms are different from previous armistice terms. The German terms are more lenient than the armistice terms contained in all former treaties of peace. The German terms are more lenient than the armistice terms contained in all former treaties of peace. REAPPORTMENTMENT MEASURE IS PASSED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The Senate today affirmed and passed the Reapportionment bill, 75 yeas to 17 nays, without division. The measure provides for an amendment stipulating that such representatives as are elected at large shall

This universe of ours, dear brethren, is a very big concern, and when we wake up in a higher world we shall wonder that we fretted so much about a dollar and a half in this world.

are quite as bad. Human nature is apt to be selfish and will follow the rule, take advantage of poverty and weakness. Although, as you recently said in one of your editorials, "I am not a dog, but I am a dog in this respect than in bygone times, it is still very selfish."
R. L. IRELAND.

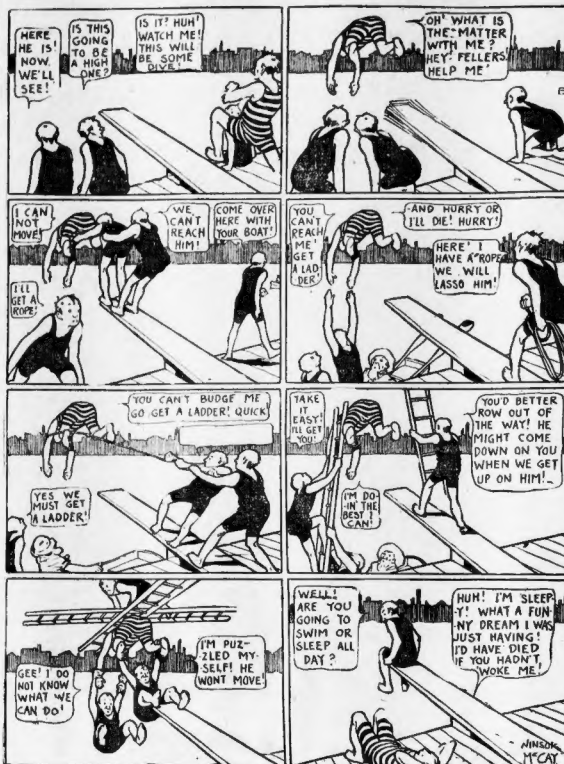

GET RID OF THE DOGS.

EDITOR AMERICAN:

You deserve to be highly commended for your editorial on the dog and dog nuisance, especially the former. As you say, they are the most common cause of human suffering. It is most alarming to note the numerous cases of rabies. But worse than that is the suffering from want of sleep caused by the barking and howling dogs at all hours of the night, both in cities and on the country.

If the adage that nothing can be given without taking is true, what a blessing to take the place of dog lovers were compelled to get rid of the dogs. I hope the U. S. people will possibly attach more value to something that would be more elevating.

I've often wondered why
The man whose power
Holds half the land in leash
Each office holds
So very lamblike seems
Before his tea,
Beating at earth and air
So helplessly.

There's none, the merchant prides,
His drives are great,

He sports at fairs.
But when he goes on the hunt,
Close to the coat,
Why does he "put" a mile
Between himself and his hounds?

Or, take Professor Gray,
Who teaches school,
And knows geometry
By rote and rule,
Who does his slice his ball
To send it true?
I'd to question him,
Or so would you.
